INDEX tells you what models we carry parts for, and on which page(s) to find them. Models with "Common Parts" in their title share parts with the indented models below.

4 Categories are used: Autoloading Pistols, Revolvers, Shotguns and Rifles to help locate the section you need.

These dashes indicate the model does not share any parts with other models

On the brownells.com website, you can search for schematics by factory name or enter the Schematic ID# found here.

Genuine, OEM parts for high-quality repair work. Parts are for current production guns unless otherwise noted. New Model Single Action includes Blackhawk, Super Blackhawk, Hunter, Vaquero, Bisley, and Single Six. These frames are interchangeable, although Bisley frames must be used with the Bisley hammer, trigger, grip panels and rear grip frame screws. All steel and stainless steel grip frames are in-the-white and require final fitting and polishing. Mark II, All includes Standard, Target, Government and Competition Models.

NOTE: There are two, distinct styles of Ruger Revolver rear sights. In approximately 1963, Ruger changed their Single Action frames and added raised ribs along both sides of the rear sight. At the same time they began making their own sight. The underside of this sight body is flat in the immediate area under the pivot pin hole. When the double action "Security" series was introduced, it too used this sight. It fit all adjustable-sight, single action and double action guns made from 1963 through 1973, but the factory has discontinued production of it.

Post-1973 production saw some extra metal added below the pivot pin holes, creating what is informally known as a "bump". The "bump" requires a corresponding relief cut in the top strap. This sight has been used on all single and double action revolvers since that time. The Brownell stock number for this sight is #780-012-049.

STOCK #	FAC.#	DESCRIPTION	CAL./GA.	PRICE

The sights themselves DO NOT interchange. However, all rear sight blades, elevation screws, elevation springs, windage screws, and windage springs DO interchange. Brownells does NOT have a replacement for the adjustable "Micro" sight used on "Flat Top" single actions manufactured prior to 1963.

Unless otherwise noted, the parts shown are for current production guns. To help you determine if a part is correct for your gun, we have listed the S&W revolver parts by frame size and models within that frame. In some instances, S&W has changed or improved parts. To distinguish guns equipped with these parts they add a "Version Suffix" to the gun's description; in the case of revolvers, it's a "–" (dash) before the revision number. Parts specific to revised models are listed under a separate heading.
SPECS: Supplied with factory-applied finish. Any part may require fitting.
